behind the wall in the old cemetery above the green, three little mounds of earth, side by side marked their burial plots. The late Phil Purcell once told me that the three tramps in question each played the fiddle and on warm summer evenings they had been accustomed for years to sit and play on the green just outside the wall. When they died the locals took care of their burial without being too official about it. The tramps couldn't afford the £5 burial fee which would otherwise have been due.

Patsy Armet was an old bachelor who lived in a little thatched house on Moat Commons - only the foundations remain. It was a great house for late card games, One morning, the story goes, an all night game was disturbed by a knock on the door. It was a travelling tailor - a Jewman - with a new suit for Patsy from measurements he had taken some weeks before. Patsy stepped into the room to fit it on and came out to model it for the tailor and the lads around the table. He edged over to the pig's pot standing on the floor in front of the fireplace, hooked his toe into the handle and landed in the soft potatoes. To the horror of the tailor he had to roll over in his struggle to get back on his feet: The suit was ruined. The tailor wrung his hands and whinged about his grand suit. "What will I do, What will I do? 'he asked. "I don't know" said Patsy, taking it off, "but it's no good to me". They settled for a few shillings. When he had gone the lads asked Patsy what he had done that for and he replied that there was nothing wrong with the suit that a little soap and water would not put rig&? It just goes to show, perhaps, that not all tramps were on the road.

Then there is the story of the stranger who came into a local pub one morning and got around to telling the few that were there how he had just come out of Mountjoy and what sort of hard grind that was. A tramp who was sitting quietly in the corner lost all patience with the fellow and bawled him off. "Mountjoy", said he, "that's not a prison, that's a hotel; I've been in prisons, army prisons, where you had to mark time while you were shaving."

Finally I share a common predicament with the tramp that had been drinking all day in Whelan's, now Jones'. Stepping out on to the street he looked in one direction and saw his view blocked by the old post office (now Grogan Solicitors, etc). Looking in the other direction he saw the opposite end walled off, as he thought, by a line-out of old houses (since demolished) across the Green, which included Aggy Weir's. He could see no way out. The poor man probably panicked at the recollection of square bashing with the British Army, for the story goes that he let off a few blinders and stalked back into the pub to inquire, "How the so and so do you get out of this place?' With that I think I will be off myself.

[1] Ribonism was an Irish Catholic sectarian secret society established at the beginning of the 19th century in opposition to the Orange Order. It was anti-landlord and its members roamed the fields at night maiming cattle by cutting a ligament. They got their name from the wearing of a green emblem.

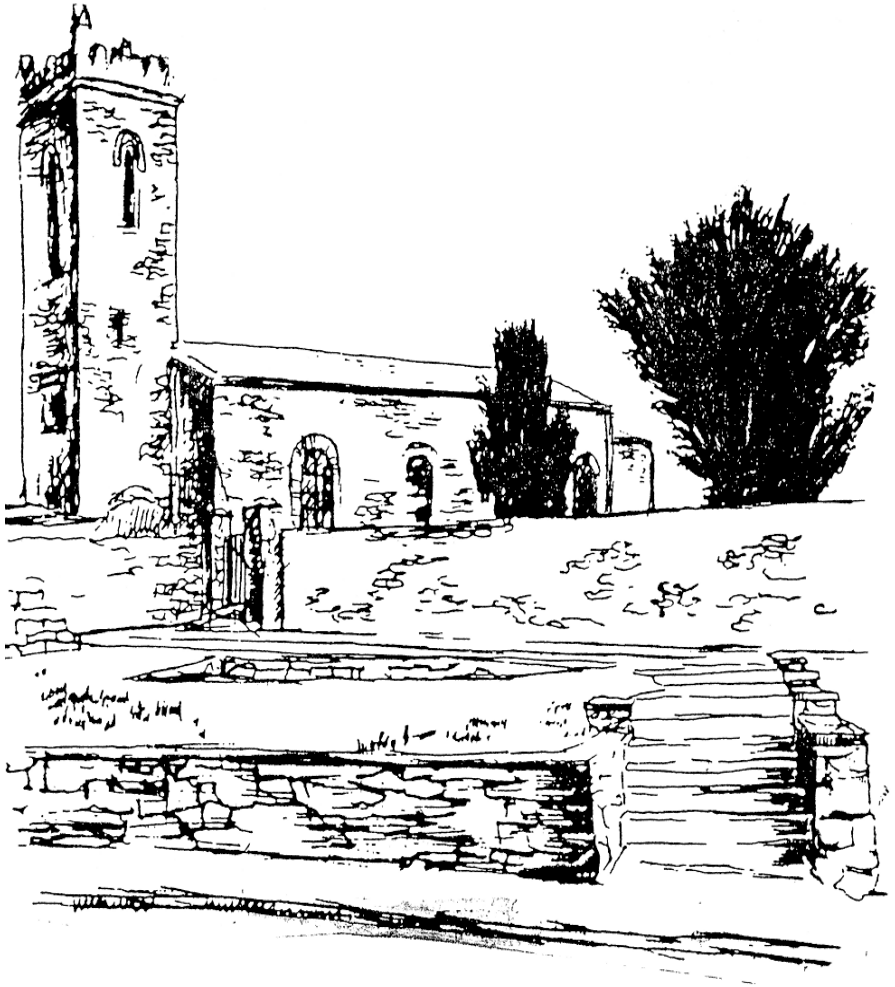
Community Magazine



November 2015 No. 339

EDITORIAL

Clane Community Council was founded in 1973 and this year will complete 21 terms, each of two years, or a total of 42. The nomination process, which will take the Community Council forward for another two year term, will take us up to 2017. Nomination Papers will be available in Clane Post Office, by kind permission. This issue of Le Chéile also carries a Nomination Paper on pages 6 and 7. If you live within the area indicated by the map on page 6 you could print out a Nomination Paper by selecting "pages 6-7". We urge everyone, 18 years or over to nominate someone to carry forward the good work, how about yourself?

You will find a brief summary of the works undertaken by the Community Council in the past 42 years on page 3. This is a short list of what has been achieved and is an indication of what might be further undertaken by working together. We in Clane should continue to value what we have and to work for its improvement. It is a case of men and women working with and for the community. The community needs your ideas, your talents and skills. There are as many ways to contribute as there are different personalities and talents. It is not just a matter of keeping what we have going, full stop. There are always new issues to be looked at and considered. Needs change with time and circumstances.

There is a saying in Irish. "Níl neart gan chur le chéile" (We have no strength until we combine our efforts). Working together means also working with other community groups -in the Sports area, in the cultural area, with Residents Associations, with the Parade Committee, with the Wheelchair Association, etc. It means working with the authorities, such as the County Council, the Gardaí, the Schools and the various providers of grant funding.. There is nothing achieved in isolation, so let's all row in together.

Look around you and you will become aware of people in your own area who you think could contribute. Indeed, how about nominating yourself? A meeting once a month, with a break in July and August is something most people could manage and think of the benefits to the community -and to you in terms of satisfaction as a volunteer in your own community.

Nil neart gan chur le chéile!

er, he set out to visit Clongowes, and a short distance outside the village he came across two grown men, stripped to the waist, and flaking lumps of each other with big sticks. You must remember that this was not uncommon in the days of faction fighting. He decided to reprimand Fr. McMahon with the fact when he returned to eat dinner with him later that evening. The P.P.'s reply was more than he bargained for. "Your Lordship" he replied, "these men are two tailors up from Carlow. They come here from all over the country just before Clongowes breaks up for the holidays, in order to measure the boys for suits. They only stay in Clane for a few days. Your Lordship has them for the rest of the year and if you cannot exert a civilizing influence on them in that time what chance do you think would I have?" Far from taking offence it appears the Bishop loved the story and told it widely.

From the time of the establishment of Clongowes in 1814 Clane had been visited by many of the national figures and prominent gentlemen and ladies of society, for the education of whose sons the college was originally founded. Visits by such worthies as Daniel O'Connell are well documented in press clippings from the time. To a man like O'Connell, who as a boy, accompanied by his younger brother, had to seek his own education in France, the value of Clongowes was clear. On the other end of the social scale, were the mendicant poor, the unfortunate tramps and alcoholics, old soldiers, victims of famine and cripples of war. The laissez faire social and economic doctrine, far from providing any type of social welfare, left these classes to fend for themselves and to stay out of the workhouse for as long as they could. Word spread among them of the charity which was available to anyone who called at the kitchen door at Clongowes. The fame of the "Gopan" spread far and wide, for this is what the food handout came to be known as, and the influx of tramps and journeymen became a feature of life around Clane, which was to continue well into the nineteen hundreds, to the late fifties in fact. A number of local families, now sadly gone, also collected it, as their ancestors had done before them. There were a few genuinely needy cases but it was largely an abuse of charity and more a matter of tradition, indeed pigs were often kept and fattened on the gopan. I remember a tramp opening his bag and trying to sell it to my mother to feed hens. "It's bad bread ma'am" he said, "baked above in the college."

This brings me back to the tramps. There were actually two boarding houses for tramps in Clane and by all accounts they did a roaring trade. These select establishments were run by Aggy Weir, who had a large house on the Green, where Campbell Tyres is now located, but it stretched the full width, right out to the roadside. The other was that of Mrs. Walsh who had a pair of old two storey houses with an interconnected door, situated on the Naas Road, just around the corner, in front of where O'Shea's Country Market now stands. Together the two "hotels" accommodated up to 40 tramps in one night and the residents of both establishments rubbed shoulders in Geoghan's pub across the road. Aggy herself also took a jar and smoked a pipe.

My oldest memories of it only go back to the late forties. At that stage both Aggy and Mrs. Walsh had already died. Walsh's still remained but was falling apart. There were two or three steps missing from the stairs, but if you surmounted these you could still view the mattresses which covered the bare floorboards upstairs. The story goes that lodgings cost two pence a night or one penny if you lay on your side. I won't go into the menu. Three former lodgers are buried in three simple unmarked graves, just

OF TRAMPS, JOURNEYMEN AND THE GOPAN

The folklore of Clane is unusual in that it abounds with stories and anecdotes about tramps and men of the road. Since I was a boy in the primary school I have listened with interest to these quaint stories as told by the older men, but there is a documented story in the "Life of J.K.L." which I feel puts all the others in perspective.

When Bishop Doyle visited Clane for Confirmation in May 1823 he was aware that no Bishop had been in the district for at least 100 years before him. He was high in his praises of the Parish Priest, the Rev. Malachy McMahon, whom he had sent to the parish only two years previously to put down Ribbonism[1]. He was very happy with the good influence Fr. McMahon had had on the local people in so short a time. These he described as having been "rude, wild and intractable". After the Confirmation, howev-

CLANE TOASTMASTERS

Would you like to improve your self-confidence in public speaking and leadership skills?

If the answer is YES- why not come along to a Clane Toastmasters Meeting? You will be guaranteed a very warm welcome. You will experience what happens at a Toastmasters Meeting and enjoy a wonderful entertaining evening.

Toastmasters Programme provides a supportive environment to improve and develop confidence in communication and learn leadership skills. Club meetings are workshops where members 'learn by doing'. Members are supported and empowered by fellow members. All achievements are recognised at every club meeting.

There are two parts to the meeting:

1.There are normally 3- 4 speeches. All speeches are evaluated individually which means the evaluator provides feedback, offers methods of improvement, builds and maintains self-esteem of the speaker.

There are other roles such as Timer, Grammarian, Word and Humourist. All members avail of the opportunity to undertake different roles at meetings. Consequently, these opportunities will enhance leadership skills.

2. The second half of the meeting consists of a Table Topics session whereby members and guests learn to practice the art of impromptu speaking on particular fun topics.

The meeting lasts two hours with a break for tea/coffee. Punctuality is vital. There are numerous fun-filled opportunities in Toastmasters. No matter how small or large your role may be, you are developing communication and leadership skills which in turn fosters self-confidence and personal growth. You can make a difference! Why not take that first step and come along to a Clane Toastmasters meeting?

Meetings take place on the first and third Wednesday of each month at 7.45pm in Clane G.A.A Club. For further details: Contact: Maureen 087 2258020; Fran: *087 6785261.

THE EVERGREENS

Well here we are with Winter upon us once more; but never mind, we must have patience: as Winter comes can Spring be far behind? We're now saying goodbye to the lovely season of mists and mellow fruitfulness with its rustic shades and hues – Autumn. All the leaves are down in colours of bright yellow, red and orange and we're all getting ready for Winter months. Still its exciting too as we prepare for Christmas.

November -month of the Holy Souls– reminds us to pray for our dead. Once again we commend them to God's loving care -may they all share Christ's victory over death and enjoy peace and joy in God's Kingdom where there is no more suffering and no more grief. We also remember all those forgotten lost souls who have died and have no one to pray for them. As we know of course that the Mass is the most powerful gift for the deceased. It is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead that they may be loosed from their sins.

Things are going very well in our Club and we would like to see more new faces join us, so do come along on Tuesdays at 2.30 and enjoy all we have to offer. We are enjoying very much our visit to Clongowes every Tuesday. We are treated so well for two hours with games, singsongs, question time, etc. and we are also treated to a lovely dinner and looked after very well.
